A NOTE ABOUT ST. PATRICK'S SCHOOL

A lot of discussion is going on about the future direction of the school, that has caused some questions to arise. I am trying to process what is going on, and had a very enlightening conversation with the principal, Mrs. Healt, this Friday. I ask for your patience and support as we work together to ensure the future and stability of the school.

PRINCES OF THE HEAVENLY KING

Of course, they knew about the proximate process of birth, but the biological source of life itself exercised such minds as Anaximander six hundred years B C and St. Augustine, Shakespeare, and the philosopher of fishing Izaak Walton, and was at least a puzzle to Darwin. Spontaneous generation was the theory that living organisms could arise from inanimate matter, like fleas born from dust, or mice from salt and bees from animal blood and, in the speculation of Aristotle, scallops from sand. The advent of micro-imagery photography of infants in the womb destroyed eugenic propaganda that this is not a human life. Those who deny that are on the level of those who continued to insist on spontaneous generation after the Catholic genius

Louis Pasteur disproved it in 1859. Cold people who are not only credulous but cruel, admit that the unborn child is human, but say "So what?" At the recent White House Correspondents'

Dinner, an astonishingly vulgar comedienne joked about abortion to the laughter of pseudo-sophisticates in evening dress. But even she slipped and used the word "baby".

Christ used the image of the vine to explain that all life is contingent, not spontaneously generated, but dependent on other lives. "A branch cannot bear fruit on its own unless it remains on the vine." Likewise, those drinking champagne at the fancy dress dinner are related to every fragile life in the womb by a common humanity. To mock that is to dehumanize the self.

On the recent feast of St. George, there was born in England, whose patron he is, Louis, a prince of the royal house. There were celebratory church bells from Westminster Abbey and a salute of cannons. Rightly so, for the birth of every baby is a cause for rejoicing. That same day, another baby, one with a neurological infirmity, was deprived of oxygen support by judicial decree and against the will of his parents, who brought him into the world by co-creation, as stewards of the Creator and not spontaneous generation. This was in defiance of an effort by Pope Francis to rescue him by military helicopter. As sons by adoption, little Louis and little Alfie are princes of the Heavenly King, not by spontaneous generation, but by divine will. Pope Leo XIII declared in Rerum Novarum: "The contention that the civil government should at its option intrude into and exercise intimate control over the family and the household is a great and pernicious error."
