THIS EXPLAINS A LOT

Ettore Gotti Tedeschi is a well-respected financial expert, whom Pope Benedict XVI placed at the head of the Vatican bank to overhaul it and clean up its murky operations. He was removed by Pope Francis from his position early in his pontificate. Here are excerpts of a talk he gave at the John Paul II Academy for Human Life, published by LifeSiteNews on 9 July 2018.

Efforts to decrease the world's population by globalist elites have set in motion a series of predictable and intended economic consequences meant to persuade people to accept a 'global political vision' that would eliminate national sovereignty and institute a gnostic environmentalism as its universal religion.

The recurring themes of the present papacy are poverty, immigration and the environment, which we are led to believe are caused "by the greed of bankers" war and man, "the cancer of nature".

For Gotti Tedeschi, the cause behinds these scourges is "the collapse of births". For him, the greatest enemy of the "New World Order" is the family, because it provides education, autonomy and independence from the state. The second enemy is the Catholic Church.

He maintains that the collapse of the birth rate is a planned strategy to create a global crisis which will make it easier to usher in a New World Order. He references "The Kissinger Report", which attempts to homogenize culture by relativizing religion, and if possible, syncretizing religion. This goal is helped by immigration. Written in 1974, the Kissinger Report said that population growth in the third world is a threat to American international interests because the growing populations of those nations need too many resources needed by the Western industrial system.

He maintains that those who hold views such as these are now advising the "top of the Church": men such as Paul Ehrlich, Jeffrey Sachs and Ban-ki Moon, people whom he calls "gnostic prophets". (For a copy of the full article, speak to Father).
