ON THE PURPOSE OF AMENDMENT

“For want of contrition, innumerable Confessions are either sacrilegious or invalid; the penitent so often breaks his promises to God, and falls again so easily into the same faults, and many souls are eternally lost.

Contrition is that true and lively sorrow which the soul has for all the sins it has committed, with a firm determination never to commit them any more....

Many Christians spend a long time examining their consciences, and in making long and unnecessary narrations to the confessor, and then bestow little or no time upon considering the malice of their sins, and upon bewailing and detesting them. Christians such as these, says St. Gregory, act like a wounded man who shows his wounds to the doctor with the utmost anxiety and care, and then will not make use of the remedies prescribed.

It is not so much thinking, nor so much speaking of your sins that will procure their pardon, but heartfelt sorrow and destation of them.”

(Fr. Ignatius of the Side of Jesus, CP. An excerpt from his “The School of Jesus Crucified”.)
